PLEASANTON — When does the First Amendment right of free speech by one person infringe on a group trying to hold a meeting? When does the person chairing a meeting have the right to limit debate or eject a person from the public gathering?

These were questions examined Tuesday in fierce debate at an open forum sponsored by the Livermore - Pleasanton - Dublin Democratic Club at the Pleasanton Hotel.

The question of Livermore council watcher Paul Tull's ejection from a council meeting in that city seemed to dominate the debate. Many members of the audience attacked the methods of Livermore Mayor Helen Tirsell, who outlined a well prepared defense of her actions.

Tenants hit increase in Komandorski rent

Tenants at Komandorski Village chipped 2 per cent from a proposed rent hike last night after wrestling with village directors for 90 minutes.

The 10 per cent increase approved by the Pleasanton Housing Authority goes into effect August 1 and will be reviewed in February with an eye towards adjustments.

Directors first considered a 12 per cent hike to cover steep climbs in utility bills. A 35 per cent hike increase from Pacific Gas and Electric Company is the main culprit, they said.

The new rates will raise the rent for a single bedroom unit to $120; $134 for a two bedroom apartment; $146 for a three bedroom unit; $171 for a four bedroom unit and $204 for a five bedroom apartment. The adjusted increase will leave the housing authority an estimated $3,400 deficit at the end of next year.

Directors said they would eliminate much running in the red by cutting into village maintenance.

This is the third increase in as many years and the meeting brought a swarm of some three dozen tenants to argue with directors.

"It doesn't make sense for us to be here. You people already made up your minds to raise the rent," said one irate woman.

Others suggested decreased maintenance in personnel to cut from the $292,000 budget.

"I just can't do it," said another woman.

The utility bill gobbles up some 55 per cent of the year's budget.

Tenants said some families in the 170 unit village waste electricity and gas, while others have cut back to meet the energy crunch.

They said the "wasters" were not at last night's meeting, and tell the more conscientious tenants to mind their own business.

Tenants lifted themselves from green and brown sofas and dwindled into the balmy evening when it became apparent they would be saddled with higher rents.

Pleasanton man racing to Honolulu

PLEASANTON—The crew T-shirt of the yacht Defiant best sums the experienced and confident stance of the seven crew members as they countdown to July 2's start of the 29th Trans-Pacific yacht race.

Pictured is a monstrosity large owl, all set to pounce on a cool and confident little mouse who is giving the owl what is generally referred to as "the bird."

A key member of that crew is Pleasanton's Jim Howell, who'll serve as navigator and one of two watch commanders during the plucky little Columbia 36's sail from Point Fermin (near Los Angeles) to Diamond Head, Honolulu.

This will be Howell's third venture with Defiant, captained by Larry Poulton of Piedmont, in the Trans-Pacific odyssey. As watch captain in '75, Howell helped bring the small racing craft in 35th in an overall field of 65 and ninth in its division.

In 1973, the craft dropped a rudder half-way across to Honolulu. The crew had to jury rig a rudder to make it the rest of the way, after initially being aided by a large motor sail boat, the Tranquility. The sail consumed 21 days—14 days after dropping the rudder midway.

Defiant, because it is the smallest of the 69 boats entered, will get a time handicap from every other entrant. In '75, for example, though it was 35th after computations, it was the 62nd of 65 boats to reach Honolulu. Total time was 13 days and 20 hours.

This will mark Defiant's fourth Trans-Pacific. Poulton bought it in 1971 as a bank repo. Seems the previous skipper was forced to surrender the boat after reaching Honolulu and finding an attorney waiting with divorce papers.

Craft in this year's race range from the Columbia 36 to be navigated by Howell to the Ondine, an 89-footer, and the Kialoa, a 79-footer that will sail with a crew of 22.

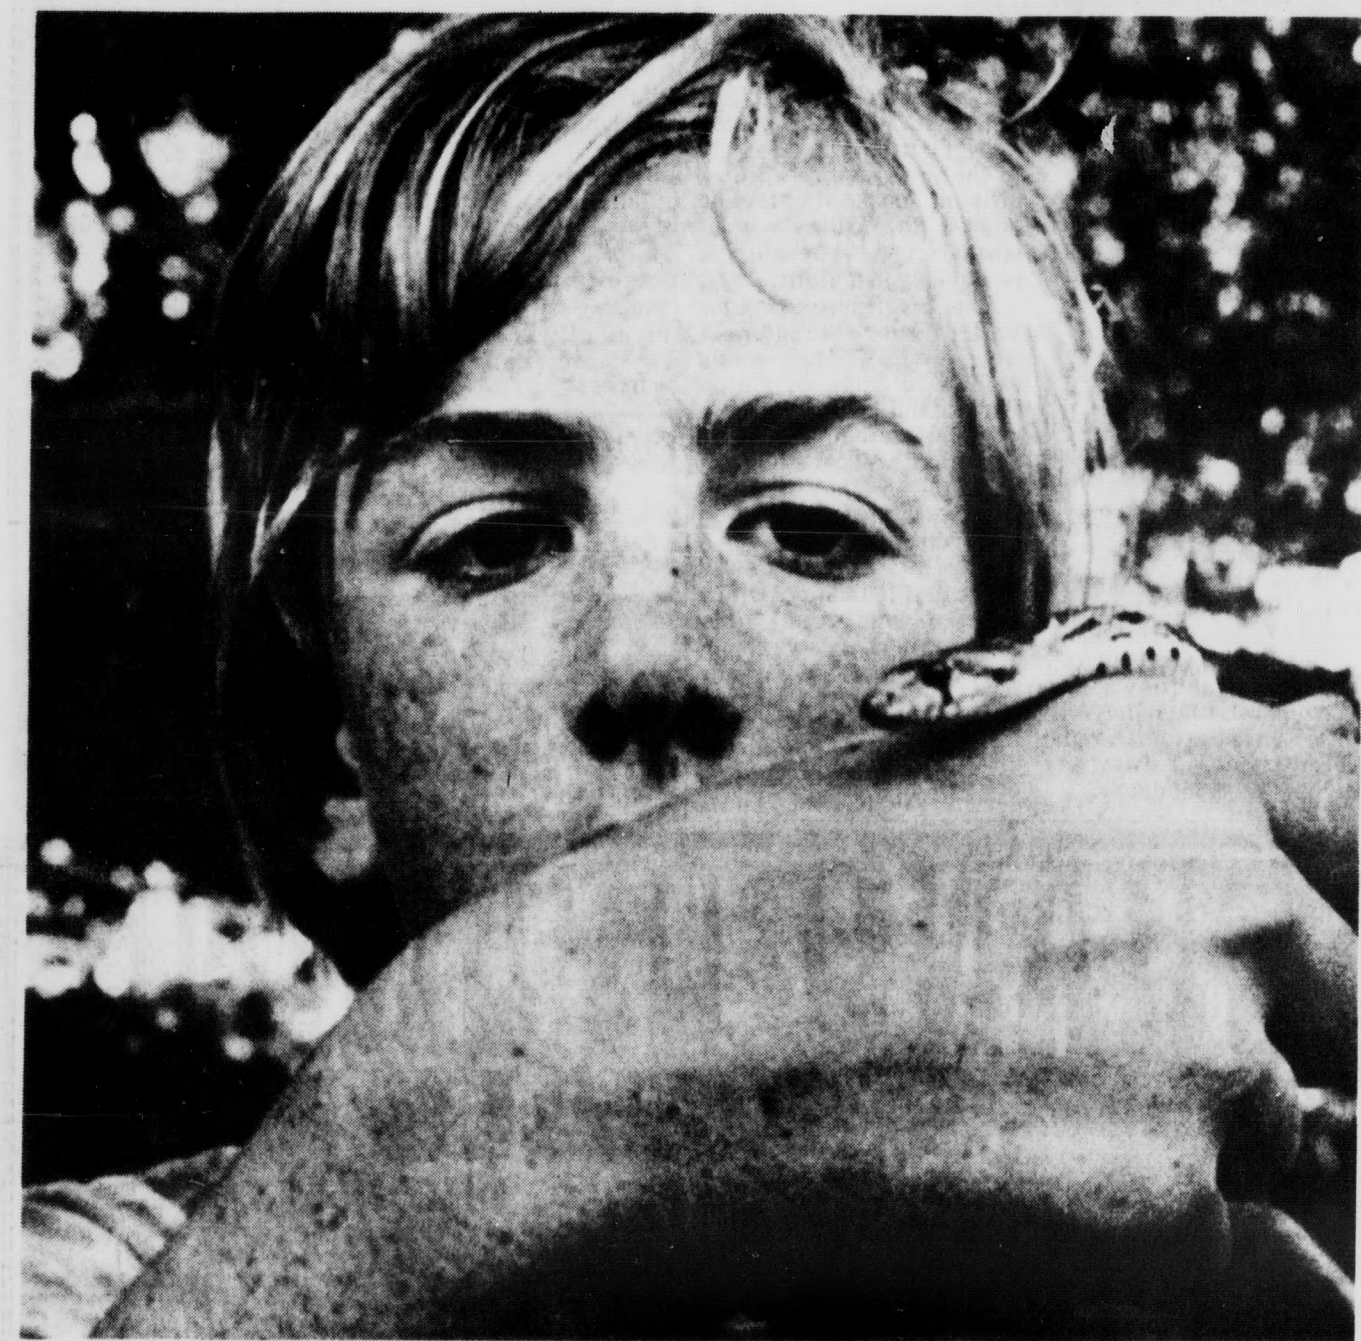

Defiant will sail with seven. In addition to Poulton and Howell, there'll be Poulton's wife Mary who'll serve as "medic," and crew members Arnold Silsby, Don Kabler, Brad Kirby, and Russ Sage.

Howell, a yearbook salesman for Josten's, says everyone in the crew will take turns piloting. Relying on the helmsman, Howell will run a continuing dead-reckoning fix, utilizing celestial navigation.

Crucial in determining the position of the boat at any given moment is fixing where the Pacific Highs are. Howell notes that the latter is what causes California's generally good weather.

"The farther away from those highs the windier it is," Howell adds.

BART hearing

The public can get in its two cents worth as BART directors hold a public hearing at 9 a.m. today on the proposed $77.1 million budget.

The meeting at BART headquarters, 800 Madison St., Oakland, will ask for comments on the 1977-78 budget which calls for Saturday service beginning in November and direct Richmond/Daly City service in March, 1978.

The budget includes a $5 million contingency for higher power costs because of the drought.

Drive-in bank

Dublin will have a Security National Bank drive-in branch soon.

The bank got a conditional use permit yesterday from Alameda County Zoning Administrator Richard Flynn to build at 7099 Regional Street near the intersection with Dublin Boulevard.

Flynn also granted a permit to allow Aggregate Systems and B&B Rentals to store construction equipment, trucks and related equipment at 6085 Scarlett Court.

Ribco Co. and Pacific Telephone got approval for a phone company storage yard extension at 6700 Sierra Ct. Court.

Sewer workshop

Pleasanton's Growth Management Committee, charged with finding a solution to the 2 per cent annual growth rate and the allocation of rare sewer connection permits, will meet this evening in the Civic Center Conference room at city hall.

The meeting begins at 7 o'clock.

SUNOL — A lasting appreciation of nature may be the biggest benefit 38 school-age children get during a six-day study of biology in the near-virgin wilderness of Sunol Valley Regional Park this month.

Sponsored by the East Bay Regional Parks District, the Camp Ohlone Biology Session took to its second year with a three-fold increase in the number of students participating in this hands-on study of nature.

The basic curriculum, carried out in a structured but seemingly casual manner, shows students aged 11-14 how to harmlessly trap and tag birds, handle a variety of reptiles and live in harmony within a natural setting.

Seven miles of narrow gravel road and two locked gates protect the camp from outsiders, where naturalist Steve Abbots is found showing a group of youngsters how to put identifying legbands on birds caught in their almost invisible mist net.

"I felt there was more that could be done to get kids interested in what we were interested in," Abbots says as he skillfully bands a mature female Lazuli Bunting, a small bird adding color to the woods.

Each of the 24 students in this week's session keeps a notebook on his self - assigned nature project, ranging from the study of leaf types to a detailed look at the one-inch tree frog. "They really get involved in their project and make discoveries that amaze themselves," Abbots says. "And sometimes amaze me."

After sending out application forms detailing the course, the 24-year-old naturalist contacts applicants personally and insures that their interest in nature is great.

Pending state bill dubbed 'mockery'

LIVERMORE — City officials are preparing to wage battle against pending state legislation that would require mandatory, compulsory and binding arbitration for local safety employees — police and fire.

Mayor Helen Tirsell yesterday noted it was "illogical that the legislature would give serious consideration to a measure that would have such a drastic impact on municipal finance."

She said it would make a "mockery of tax reform in the state."

She said Senate Bill 164 is "constitutionally questionable because it would require elected officials to delegate authority to a non-elected, non responsible third party."

Proponents contend the compulsory and binding arbitration would help prevent strikes, but Tirsell argues similar legislation in other states have not prevented strikes.

Although the legislation reportedly has "nonwithdrawable penalties" on strikers, said Tirsell, "history shows that the granting of amnesty is a precondition to strike settlements."

She said compulsory arbitration may have a chilling effect on the bargaining process because "it inhibits the parties from making their best efforts to reach a voluntary settlement."

Dublin coffee heist suspect pleads guilty

SAN FRANCISCO — A Dublin man accused of stealing $36,000 worth of coffee from a Hayward warehouse Feb. 18 has pleaded guilty to a lesser charge in federal court.

Daniel Fernandez Basque, 37, pleaded guilty to a charge of theft from an interstate shipment of less than $100. He will be sentenced Aug. 15 by U.S. District Court Senior Judge George B. Harris.

Basque was one of three men arrested by the FBI Feb. 24 on suspicion of stealing 12,000 pounds of Folgers coffee from a trucking terminal owned by Illinois - California Express Co. in Hayward.

Clifford R. Ortiz, 39, of Hayward, pleaded guilty to a felony count of stealing 500 cases of coffee, and Nickolas H. Rizzo, 51, of Hayward pleaded guilty to a felony count of theft of 21 cases. They will be sentenced Aug. 8 in Judge Harris' court.

Judge Harris is considering a motion filed by Basque's lawyers to dismiss other charges in the case. Those charges were not specified.

Key sewer referendum

PLEASANTON — Opponents in the ever widening war over the city's decision to fund the "super sewer" pipeline without voter approval may settle their differences in court.

CARD Committee leaders this week slapped a 2,171-signature petition on city hall calling for another vote over the proposed $38 million pipeline project.

Their whirlwind, 10-day referendum drive is aimed at cutting off a city council decision to sanction the sale of some $8.5 million in Livermore - Amador Valley Water Management (LAVWMA) bonds.

LAVWMA, the Valley wide joint powers agency charged with building the line, has approval from all three of its member agencies to redraft the agreement and market the bonds in spite of a rebuff from voters last November.

Dissidents in Livermore are chasing the more than 5,000 signatures needed for a recall aimed at ousting the current city council.

But Pleasanton officials say their council's decision was an "administrative" one rather than a "legislative" move. And "administrative" decisions are not subject to a referendum.

"How does (city attorney) Scheidig get off making rules rules?" bellowed referendum leader John Fraga.

Will his group sue if turned out by the city council?

"We'll cross that bridge when we come to it," he answered. "Scheidig's about through making rules."

The city attorney could not be reached for comment.

But his deputy, Harvey Levine, said the distinction between "administrative" and "legislative" decisions is a crucial one.

Legislative moves "set policy," he said. "They create a direction."

On the other hand, administrative decisions implement those policies.

And only legislative decisions can be challenged through a referendum.

Neither Levine nor deputy clerk Doris George knew when the referendum would come before the city council. Council members are expected to accept Scheidig's legal opinion.

Council can either rule the referendum an improper ballot measure, or cast the decision to voters, or rescind its earlier LAVWMA amendment.

The city will verify the petition signatures within 30 days. Ten per cent of the city's registered voters must have signed it, a minimum 1461 signatures.

The CARD Committee has a 710 voter edge if all signatures are valid.

LAVWMA officials say the pipeline is necessary because the state and federal governments will only contribute their pledged 87.5 per cent funding for the most "cost effective" method of taking treated Valley sewage out of the Alameda Creek.

The Valley already is under a cease and desist order from the state Regional Water Quality Control Board that freezes all sewer connections.

LAVWMA balks on pump station pact

PLEASANTON — A dispute with the U.S. Army over distributing capacity in the proposed $38 million effluent disposal pipeline caused the Valley's joint sewage agency to adopt a new policy last night.

The Livermore Amador Valley Water Management Agency (LAVWMA) wants to buy 10 acres of Camp Parks land in Dublin for a pumping station. The army has said it will sell the land only if LAVWMA guarantees it 300,000 gallons of capacity in the line.

The board expressed fears that the army, which presently produces only 38,000 gallons of sewage per day, will greatly expand its operation up to the allowed level. Then it could cancel its agreement to handle the sewage flow from Koman-dorski Village and Santa Rita jail, creating an additional burden on the pipeline.

Directors voted to prohibit an agency from distributing capacity without board approval. Negotiations with the army on the land sale will continue, and directors will also seek to buy land from another source.

Delay in Cal State cop case

The preliminary hearing of accused murderer Fred Moreno was held over until Monday so that pathologist Dr. Allan B. McNie could testify.

Moreno, a 39-year-old Pleasanton man is charged with the shooting deaths of two fellow Cal State Hayward campus patrolmen.

The only testimony heard at yesterday's proceeding was that of key witness Laura Bartoni, a radio dispatcher on duty the night of the incident.

and weekend yachtsmen following the race closely.

Three committee boats travel the sailing lanes and transmit daily standings, after running navigational data through computers on board.

At 10 each morning, entrants must radio what their position was at 8 that day.

Positions of the yachts and their standing are plotted and available to family and friends in Honolulu, Los Angeles and at the St. Francis Yacht Club in San Francisco.

The sailing "bug" is not just confined to Howell, who resides on Driftwood Way just off Foothill Road. One son, Jon, will leave soon to serve as crew in a national junior boat competition scheduled for Little Rock, Arkansas.

Armed robbers at SR

Leshar News Bureau CONCORD — An all night Concord market clerk was shot in the leg Wednesday morning during a robbery, police said.

The Short Stop Market at 3598 Willow Pass Road, Concord, was one of three Short Stop Markets robbed Tuesday night and Wednesday morning, law enforcement officials reported.

However, neither the suspects nor the types of weapons used in the robberies were related.

Wounded at the Concord market, the last of the three robberies, was clerk Mike Jennings, 22, address unavailable. Jennings was treated at Mt Diablo Hospital for a superficial leg wound.

A police bulletin described the suspect as a white male adult with long blond hair, a beard of about three or four days growth and wearing a bushy dark jacket. He was armed with what may have been a .22-caliber automatic.

The first robbery occurred at the Short Stop Market on 3458 Golden Gate Way, Lafayette, at 10:50 p.m.

The suspects described as two male Mexicans in their late teens pointed a revolver at clerk Charles Habis, 29, and took $150.

Habis said one of the suspects entered earlier and bought some potato chips, apparently easing the store.

The two suspects fled on foot after grabbing the money from the cash register.

At 1:42 a.m., clerk Brian Nugent, 31, at the San Ramon Short Stop, 2108 San Ramon Valley Blvd., saw a young man enter his store asking for a pay phone.

Nugent described the gunman as in his early 20s, about 5-foot-10, 160 pounds, with long brown hair. He fled in an orange van.

Fight over county pension fund and S. Africa ties

The controversy over boycotting American firms which do business in South Africa or with its segregationist government boiled over to the Alameda County Board of Supervisors Tuesday.

The county's only Black supervisor, John George of Oakland, thinks the county should take its pension funds out of firms which do business in or with the segregated country. George postponed discussion of the issue until after he can show a film, "Last Grave at Dimbaza" to the supervisors and the public at 2 p.m. June 30. The movie, by San Francisco Newsreel, shows life in the apartheid society.

Supervisor Joseph Bort thought the issue was not investment of $31 million of county funds in such firms as Xerox and Ford Motor Company, but rather how those firms operate with respect to hiring in South Africa.

Boycotting is a two way street, Bort added. To see it from the other perspective, imagine South Africa or the boycotted firms encouraging Otis Elevators (since dropped from the list of county investments) to remove its elevators from the county building, said Bort.

On the other hand, replied George, maybe they would write back and say they will invest in corporations that do business in Alameda County.

County Counsel Richard

Moore said the board can pass a policy about investing money in the corporations under fire, but the decision is up to the semi-autonomous county retirement board which oversees the county's pension fund investments.

Sending work to prison

Convicts at San Quentin will do some Alameda County data processing soon, which prompted Alameda County Supervisor Joseph Bort to lament they don't make furniture like they used to.

The supervisors this week approved a contract to send some county data processing work to San Quentin where convicts will work on it as part of their on-the-job training program in data processing. No confidential or criminal justice data will be sent to the big yellow buildings on the Bay.

Bort noted that convicts used to get a lot more work in the old days. They built furniture and brooms, but objections from labor unions and businesses about "unfair competition" caused nearly all states to abandon those commercial enterprises.

"All the productive programs disappeared over the years," said Bort.

"All you can do now is train them for white collar management," the Valley's supervisor, Valerie Raymond, said tongue-in-cheek.

A plea for cheap doctors

The old refrain about "doctors making too much money" was brought up this week by Alameda County Supervisor Joseph Bort.

After the supervisors approved more than $200,000 for county hospital deficits resulting from inflation's rising costs, Bort suggested the medical profession train more people, so their salaries drop. He believes much of the rising medical costs to the county is coming in higher salaries for medical personnel.

"I don't know whether Dr. Gross is concerned about this," said Bort, as he looked over to medical department head Stuart Gross on the sidelines of the supervisors' meeting.

"I'm frugal," replied Gross. "But you have more to be frugal with," said Bort. "If I save 10 per cent and you save 4 per cent, you still have more money than I do." Gross didn't respond to that.

Fair's Voc Ed Olympics open Sunday afternoon

PLEASANTON — The annual Vocational Education Olympics at the County Fair will begin Sunday with demonstrations in hair styling at 1 p.m.

Olympics demonstrations and competition will take place in the Young California Building. Sunday's hair styling demonstration will be followed by quick service hair cutting at 1:30 p.m. and 3 p.m.

On Monday, there will be demonstrations of drafting (1 p.m.), automotive (2 p.m.), carpentry (3 p.m.) and arc welding (7 p.m.).

Demonstrations continue next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons. Production typing, timed typewriting, stenography and computation, printing calculator, are scheduled Tuesday. Sewing and bachelor meals are slated Wednesday and cashing and automotive body repairs Thursday.

The annual Diaper Derby at the County Fair will be held Saturday, July 9.

Contestants must be one year or under on July 9, 1977. The boy and girl who cross the stage of the Court of 4 Seasons in the fastest time will become Diaper King and Diaper Queen.

The first 24 applicants received at the Fairgrounds office on Pleasanton Avenue in person or by mail compete.

For further information and an entry form for the 15th annual Diaper Derby, contest the Fairgrounds offices, 846-2881.

Wednesday, July 6 and Thursday, July 7 have been designated "School Days" at the County Fair. On each of these days all boys and girls 15 years of age and under will be admitted free of charge to the Fairgrounds from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Another review for car sign

Livermore Planning Commissioners undertook the following action at their meeting Tuesday night:

— referred a requested Ozzie Davis Toyota used car lot sign back to the design review committee, when it was learned the proposed 49 square foot sign exceeded the 33 square feet allowed for the size of the small building where it would be located.

— denied a request by Ronald L. Suttora, 839 Sunset Drive, to have a home occupation permit for a mail order photo sales and processing of prints and film of other photographers.

According to a staff report, home occupations are permitted only when "public business" is conducted off the residential premises, "ensuring the maintenance of the residential character of the property."

Although Suttora plans a mail order business, planners were concerned the business might grow, including expansion of the processing facilities.

During a recent city council discussion of the new home occupation policy, council members generally agreed home occupations were encouraged and they noted many home businesses enlarge to become regular businesses which then move into a designated commercial area of the city.

— held fast to the 94 foot future width line they recommended last December for East Avenue. City council had referred the matter back to the planners after holding discussions in April with top brass from the county and Lawrence Livermore Laboratory. Discussion of those groups favored a 104 foot roadway that could be reconstructed with minimal damage to any private property.

Planners said the 94 foot width was a proper compromise and would provide maximum protection of private property rights.

BART and a bike get him to work

Robert Allen, the Valley's BART director, once had nothing but praise for the automobile and its relation to the commuter along Interstate 580, but now he has changed his mind.

Allen, according to a press release from BART, commutes by BART train to the Oakland West station every morning and then makes the rest of the journey to his Southern Pacific office by bicycle.

It takes Allen about five minutes to cover the one mile between the BART station and his office.

Allen, who is described as "not an avid bike enthusiast," thought it would be practical to do the bike commute and he took advantage of a special introductory rate on the new bike lockers. He signed up early for the program (it pays to attend BART board meetings) and is leasing a locker at the Oakland West station for $5 per month with one month thrown in free over the three months.

"At first I was not sure if I would use my bike more often than not to make the trip, but since using it for commuting I find that it not only gives good exercise, but tends to be a great springboard to start off the day," said Allen.

It's a rare day now when

he does not use his bicycle, said Allen.

The discount offer on the bike lockers will apply to all who sign agreements prior to July 1. BART owns and maintains the lockers.

He wants to collect garbage

A private entrepreneur with one garbage truck will see if he can win Alameda County's first garbage franchise when a public hearing is held at 2:30 p.m. July 14 at the supervisors' chambers, 1221 Oak St., Oakland.

Charles Knowles wants to pick up garbage along Happy Valley Road and other unincorporated areas near Pleasanton. That also is being done by Pleasanton Garbage Service, which has a franchise to be the sole collector only within the Pleasanton city limits.

Since beyond the city limits is laissez-faire land, Knowles got a truck and started service. He holds a permit from the county health department.

The county's Solid Waste Management Committee was asked to comment on whether the unincorporated area should have an exclusive franchise, but the committee would not take a stand.

So supervisors, with no precedent to guide them, said they will have a public hearing to see if they will or should grant an exclusive franchise in the unincorporated area.

Farm advisory group passed

A special county committee designed to help preserve agriculture was approved 4-0 by the Alameda County Board of Supervisors this week.

The committee will meet once a month and be advisory only to the board of supervisors, concentrating primarily on the planning as it relates to the county's conservation element general plan element.

Among the group's charges are: advise on planning, zoning and development proposals in rural areas; undertake studies relating to preservation of agriculture; protection of soil resources; property taxation, and determining compatible uses with agriculture.

Other duties will be to participate periodically in reviewing county guidelines for the Williamson Act; report to the board of supervisors the effects of state legislation on affecting agricultural resources; work with cities, districts and the county on conflicts between agricultural and urban areas; and advise county departments on the impacts of programs affecting agriculture.

There will be 14 members, including County Planning Director William Fraley; Farm Advisor Gordon Winlow; County Agricultural Commissioner Tom Shoemaker; USDA District Representative Robert Roan; the manager of the Production Credit Association; representatives from the Cattleman's Association, Farm Bureau and Resource Conservation District (one each); a livestock producer from East County and one from West of the hills; one person each in row crops, field crops, viticulture and either horticulture or floriculture.

The committee expects to begin meetings next month. Organizations mentioned above will nominate members subject to approval by the board of supervisors.

SAN RAMON — It takes two years and approval from about 5,000 persons before one textbook is placed in the hands of an elementary school student in the San Ramon Valley Unified School District.

Ten years ago it didn't take so long, but that was before legislation mandated that minority group history be included in texts, and that sexism be eliminated.

The new process of choosing a book includes the task of making certain it complies with the law.

"The old system was very rigid," says Joanne McHenry, program coordinator of instructional materials for the district. "And although it does take longer for the child to receive a book, I think the overall result is better now," she said.

McHenry has lived, taught and worked with instructional materials in the San Ramon valley for 23 years, and remembers when state text lists offered few choices, usually from only two or three publishers.

Now there are some 60 publishers represented on a list that has at least 60 choices of multiple and single texts, plus such materials as film strips.

"There used to be incredible waste of materials, too," remembers McHenry. There were warehouses of unused books in good condition that didn't do the job teachers wanted. We haven't had that problem at all with the new selection system."

Cost of a single text averages about $7. The books chosen now differ greatly from texts McHenry used when she taught elementary classes. She compared a 1949 history of California with a modern social studies text. Color used for illustrations is the most striking difference. Larger print on new books is used.

However, the language in a 1977 social studies book is simpler than that used in a 1949 text.

Joanne McHenry presides over the selection — and disposal — of thousands of school books.

"We figure that the old book for a fourth grader would be judged at a fifth grade level now, and the new books are just out of the third grade level."

"But we couldn't hold the attention of a class today with a 1949 book. It has small black and white photos, and lots of grey looking pages. Our children today are used to color television and action, and they are learning with other aids besides texts," she explains.

The process of selecting a book now includes state committees who must see that a book complies with recent legislation.

The books are further examined by local committees, which include administrators, teachers, PTA representatives, parents and interested residents.

By the time a book is finally chosen, about 5,000 persons have examined it, McHenry said.

A book, or other instructional material ordered July 1, 1976, will not be used in a classroom until September, 1978. Samples of all books being considered are kept in the instructional materials building on Crow Canyon Road.

Teachers and parents have access to the books, and there are public displays of the chosen texts. Instances of books being rejected at the last minute are rare now, McHenry said, although it could happen.

A hard back text must be revised or examined again after six years to make sure it still complies with the latest legislation governing texts.

The books must be removed from the classes after six years. They go to a warehouse, and McHenry personally supervises their disposal.

"I guess I'm paranoid on the subject," she said. "We used to be able to send books to foreign countries, via the U.S. Navy, but that isn't done anymore. We can't afford to ship the books ourselves."

"Many of the books really are worn out when their time is up, but sometimes there are many in good condition. We try to encourage private schools and small church groups and anyone with any need for the books to come and get them."

"I pick the books out that are in good condition, and put them on shelves so that they can be used for references, because often the content is okay."

"When it comes to having to do the job of disposing of a book, I tear it up myself, put it in a gondola and send it to the dump."

"And it hurts every time I do it," said McHenry.

Ex-Sunol school chief back in new Bay Area district

A former superintendent of the Sunol Glen School District and one of the first presidents of the Pleasanton Rotary Club, Pete Corona will be returning to the South Bay Area this summer to take over the superintendent reins of the Mount Pleasant School District in San Jose.

Corona has spent his entire quarter century in professional education in California elementary and secondary schools. He can call upon a lengthy record of state educational committee credits as well as point to numerous community honors bestowed upon him. The latest is a special plaque accorded him by the Montebello City Council.

The latter came as he was completing his fourth year as assistant superintendent of the large Montebello Unified School District in Southern California.

A history graduate of the University of California, holding a doctoral degree in educational leadership and human behavior, Corona was superintendent-principal at Sunol Glen from 1960-70.

In fact, Pete gave present Sunol Glen leader George Bury his first teaching job.

Corona was a community leader during his years in the Valley, not only being president of Rotary during his 1965-70 association but president and member of the board of the Amador-Livermore Historical Society during the years from 1964-70. Pete also served on the Pleasanton Chamber of Commerce board and was a member of the Livermore-Amador Valley Committee on Special Education.

Though his initial teaching assignments were as assistant baseball coach at his alma mater and as a teacher in the tiny Byron School District, Pete soon moved into administration.

After a two year stint in the mid-50s in the Walnut Creek School District, he served as a vice-principal in the district.

Prior to coming to Sunol Glen, he served as summer school coordinator and principal in Walnut Creek and summer school consultant.

After 10 years in Sunol, and a brief assignment in 1970 as an instructor at Ohlone College in Fremont, Pete was named superintendent of the Benicia Unified School District.

He was there three years before taking the assistant superintendent's job in Montebello, a district with a total enrollment of 25,000.

During his four years in Montebello, Corona undertook and accomplished some momentous tasks, including working with 83 parent-advisory groups. He was also responsible for pupil and community services and for making the crucial enrollment projections. Corona also handled county counsel opinions.

He has been particularly active in the Association of California School Administrators (ACSA) and has served as a member of committees on political action, urban affairs, equal educational opportunity, resolutions, and instruction.

In 1975, Corona was the sole school representative invited by the Montebello City Council to serve as the city's delegate before the George Gallup Committee in Chicago in its bid for an All-American City Award.

His doctoral dissertation, which was copyrighted in 1969, dealt with the role of the superintendent as perceived by community leaders and school administrators. His master thesis focused on bond and operating tax election requirements resulting from state reassessment practices.

Corona has also been listed amongst the Outstanding Men of Achievement in World; Cambridge, England, 1976, Who's Who in the United States, Who's Who in the West, and in the bicentennial edition of Community Leaders and Noteworthy Americans.

Now at home in Walnut Creek, he and his wife, Yolanda, are preparing for the coming school year. She is a teacher in the Mount Diablo Unified School District.

Corona's new assignment will take him into a relatively small district of some 3,000 students with "a good distribution of ethnic backgrounds in a metropolitan setting."

The Mount Pleasant district is in metropolitan San Jose.

Chabot has courses for the consumer

Beginning with this summer session, Chabot College will offer a selection of courses under the heading of Consumer Education.

These topics are designed for consumers of all ages and interests. Topics include self-medication, food storage and preservation, basic home maintenance/home repairs, conservation of natural resources, consumer law-consumer rights, family money management, and "You and Your Automobile — The Weekend Mechanic."

Most of the courses are offered in the evening and run for either three weeks or six weeks. Brochures describing the various courses with appropriate dates and times can be found in the college's counseling and registration areas.

For those students who can not attend the summer sessions, look for the Consumer Education courses offered in the autumn quarter. Courses will be varied through the school year.

For further information, telephone 782-3000, ext. 450.

State school rolls down

Enrollment in California's public schools declined 8,337, 0.2 per cent, between the fall of 1975 and the fall of 1976, Wilson Riles, state Superintendent of Public Instruction, reported today.

This was a marked reversal of enrollment figures for the preceding year, which showed an increase of 71,638, 1.4 per cent. Total enrollment for elementary and secondary schools, which includes adult education and education for the handicapped, is 5,070,514 — higher than in any other state.

The annual compilation of data on active enrollment in public elementary and secondary schools in California was prepared from reports from elementary, high school and unified school districts and from the offices of the county superintendent of schools.

The overall decrease this year can be explained by greater declines in elementary enrollments, a state Department of Education report said. These were not, as in the past, offset by expansions of enrollment in the adult program.

When the category of adult enrollment is omitted from both the fall, 1975, and fall, 1976, totals, Riles said, the 1975 total becomes 4,419,571, compared to the 1976 total of 4,380,400.

The study disclosed that graded enrollment, kindergarten through grade 12, decreased 48,946 (1.1 per cent) from the enrollment figure reported a year earlier.

Comparable figures for the fall of 1975 showed a decrease, by contrast, of 10,943, 0.3 per cent, from those reported for the previous year.

The enrollment decline, however, was confined to the kindergarten through elementary grades for the period from 1975 to 1976, Riles said. The decline was 1.7 per cent, as compared with a decrease of only 0.9 per cent in the previous year.

High school enrollment, grades 9-12, on the other hand, showed an increase of 0.1 per cent compared with 1.2 per cent for the previous year.

Enrollments of adults in the public schools showed an increase of 30,834, or 4.7 per cent, between 1975 and 1976. Although still showing appreciable gains, the increase fell far short of the comparable period for the preceding year, when the gain was 79,510 or 13.7 per cent.

"This development seems to be consistent with current experience in adult classes — still expanding, but at a declining rate," Riles said.

SERVING & SERVICING THE BAY AREA FOR OVER 38 YEARS

The kids love him 'cause he's cool, man

Malik Shabazz, a big black man with shiny head and a tiny gold earring, does not look like the average community guy.

And maybe that's because he's not. Shabazz, a jack-of-all-trades with an easy grin and a gaggle of kids always wading around him, has been into a lot of different scenes in his life.

He's been a professional boxer. A recording artist. Even an ex-X-ray technician who's worked with world-famous doctors.

But now the conga player/athlete is involved with what must be the most calm, traditional job he's ever had — coordinator of Y-Pals, a Twin Valley YMCA program for underprivileged and single parent children.

"I'm in the people business now," he says, "and I love it to death."

The father of four and Livermore resident, however, says that his previous work wasn't always so gentle. While serving in the 101st Airborne Division, Shabazz got interested in boxing. He earned a distinguished title on the Army boxing team, then turned pro. Despite an impressive 25-win, 5-loss record, Shabazz says he decided to get out of the ring for good "to get some education for myself."

He did, and went to work as a certified X-ray technician, working with such medical figures as world-famous heart specialist Dr. Michael DeBakey.

But he decided to change careers when he realized that "I just couldn't stand the suffering of the people."

While on the streets of East Oakland, his childhood home, Shabazz saw the need for more community leaders for kids. "There were so many little children, out on the streets in the summer, with no money and nothing to do," he says. So, he decided to get involved, and began a workshop for kids in his garage and a program that was eventually called the Inter-city Youth Corps.

"We hauled those kids everywhere in an old Volkswagen van," he laughs, "and they loved it, fishing, swimming, whatever."

It was after graduating from San Jose State University and working on his master's degree that Shabazz made the final decision to work with what he loved best — kids.

"I've received a lot of joy seeing children happy, learning," he smiles. "Anytime I'm with a child, I'm trying to teach them something, because if they can learn, they can give to someone else."

Now that he's a YMCA leader, he plans on continuing to teach kids new and different things. But there may be changes in store for him in the future, perhaps in one of his other interests — music.

Malik Shabazz, director of the new Y-Pals program for kids with single parents at the

It seems Shabazz plays conga, drums and percussion for a Bay Area funk-rock band called Messiah — a band that was lucky enough to catch the ear of a top area talent scout. They've just recorded an album called "The Bunch of Us," and have also been signed to a recording contract with Columbia Records.

But even if Messiah did strike it rich on the music charts, he says success just wouldn't make that much difference as far as the kids go. "I'd plug the money into more projects here, he says. "I'd really like to start a youth camp." Right now, he's keeping busy trying to hustle up some BART tickets to take a group of boys to a baseball game ("They cost $37.50 and we just don't have it") and lending a helping hand in YMCA fundraising dinners ("I call myself Mr. Barbecue Extraordinaire").

At least one thing's for sure — that when it comes to kids and his projects, Malik Shabazz isn't going to stop caring.

"I have to see things through until the end," he says. "I'm just not a quitter."

Teaching grants available now

Fulltime public school teachers contemplating a sabbatical or leave of absence for study leading to the expansion of their educational horizons or specialization in a related teaching area are encouraged to apply for the 1977-78 mid-career scholarships available through the California State Parent Teacher Assoc.

Scholarships of $1000 each will be granted to four credentialed teachers who have worked fulltime in the teaching profession at the elementary or secondary school level within California during the 1976-77 academic year and plan to enroll in an accredited state college or university in California.

Applications are available at the State PTA office, 930 Georgia St., Los Angeles, CA 90015, and must be returned to that office postmarked no later than July 31.

Consumer help

Do you know about Consumer Action Panels? CAPS? If you have a problem with a car, furniture, or major appliance, the Consumer Action Panels can help.

But sending your complaint to CAPS is not the first step, according to Consumer News, the twice a month newsletter from the Office of Consumer Affairs. First you should try to settle the problem with the dealer or store.

If they can't help, then go to CAPS.

When CAPS receives a complaint, a staff member will contact the manufacturer to ask that they look into the complaint further, and notify of any action. If the consumer is still not satisfied, the staff member refers the complaint to panel members for review. If you have a furniture complaint, contact the FI-

CAP office...Nancy High, Executive Director, Furniture Industry Consumer Advisory Panel, Box 951, High Point, NC 27261.

Complaints involving major appliances should be sent to MACAP... Virginia Habeeb, Chairman, Major Appliance Consumer Action Panel, 20 North Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill 60606; toll-free hotline 800-621-0477.

There are 18 AUTOCAPS across the country, and an additional 18 AUTOCAP organizations work to resolve car complaints, although they do not have formal or regular panels of decision makers. To find out if there is an AUTOCAP serving your area, check with your local or state Automobile Dealers Association, which sponsors the various AUTOCAPS or with the local Chamber of Commerce or Better Business Bureau.

Linda Beede, 17, Demi Lanning, 16 and Cathy Jantzen, 15 are three lucky girls who have been chosen as the 4-H Club All Stars for Alameda County this year.

Handy guide to emergencies out

You could be enjoying a quiet conversation over a sumptuous meal at your favorite restaurant when your spouse or friend suddenly gasps for breath and quickly turns pale and then blue. What should you do?

There are some emergency first aid measures you can learn that may help you save his or her life.

The Dept. of the Interior has a new pocket-sized reference guide for treating medical emergencies from strain and sprains to shock, choking or heart attack. Immediate first aid can mean the difference between life and death for a person who is injured or suddenly ill.

For your copy of "First Aid," send 80 cents to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 120E, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

If the victim is not breathing or gasps for breath, something could be stuck in his or her throat. Try to remove the piece of food or other object with your index and middle fingers.

Lean the victim forward at the waist and let the head and arms hang down. Put one hand on your own wrist; make a fist with the other hand; squeeze suddenly and firmly against the victim's abdomen.

Pre-fair peek set

Elegant model gardens, photography and art will be on display at the Champagne Preview of the Alameda County Fair in Pleasanton Saturday, June 25 from 7 to 10 p.m.

The party is sponsored by the Alameda County Fair Assoc. aided by Mulberry Branch for the benefit of Children's Hospital Medical Center in Oakland.

Guests will gather from 7 to 10 p.m. to sip champagne, sample hors d'oeuvres and stroll among the many displays which will be judged that evening.

The Fair officially opens the following day, June 26.

For more information on the preview evening, call Mrs. John Noonan at 443-6044 or Marcie Ellis at 447-6252.

TV auction

The 23rd annual KQED Auction brought in a record of $705,808, topping last year's total of $655,736. KQED has announced.

A goal of $700,000 was raised by this year's event, which ran from May 31 to June 11, and sold items ranging from a lifetime supply of Levi's to a movie premiere. The most expensive item was a six-foot diameter world globe, which went for $16,000 and a 1926 Franklin, which sold for $15,000.

Y-Pals program seeks leaders

Twin Valley YMCA has introduced a new program for youth, ages 7 to 12, who have only one parent in the home — Y-Pals.

The program, providing activities and field trips for the kids, will match girls and boys with leaders on a one-to-four ratio.

Y-Pals will be holding camp sessions for youngsters, as well as special events such as nature tours, hiking and camping.

Delays in Chowchilla case blamed on Defense

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The state attorney general's office has asked the California Supreme Court to expedite the latest in a series of defense motions in the Chowchilla mass kidnapping case.

Deputy Atty. Gen. Timothy Reardon argued that the delays "in these protracted proceedings" were attributable to the defense.

Defense attorney Herbert Yanowitz, who has asked the high court to bar the press and public from a pretrial hearing, responded with a letter of his own. He said substantial delays occurred because of the trial judge's decision to delay proceedings in the case while lawyers argued motions to change the location of the trial, first from Madera County to Alameda County. Later motions to move the trial again were denied.

Yanowitz noted the latest delay occurred because the Supreme Court ordered postponement of a hearing on suppression of evidence while it considers the defense request to bar the public from the proceedings.

The high court has 30 days in which to decide if it will consider the motion.

Fred Woods and James Schoenfeld, both 24, and Richard Schoenfeld, 22, were indicted on 27 counts of kidnapping and 18 counts of robbery for the July 15th abduction of 26 Chowchilla school children and their bus driver.

Video dating gimmick makes mating easier

By JESSICA FRAZIER
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — "It was just like opening a box of candy," enthuses one young woman. But she wasn't talking about candy as she described a loose-leaf notebook full of information about single men.

She's one of the 550 members of a unique dating service using the latest in technology to try to satisfy the age old desire of men and women to meet each other.

The service, Great Expectations, costs $200 to join. Each member fills out a profile and then makes a five-minute television tape, talking about himself or herself.

Members check out information about other members. When a man, or woman, is interested, the person he's interested in is told. She can then look at his tape and the pair can exchange telephone numbers if the desire is mutual.

"The double screening process works," claims Jeff Ullman, the 27-year-old president of the year-old Westwood company. He says business is so successful he plans to begin franchising in other large cities.

There have been five marriages of people who met through the service, says Ullman, including one pair who wed eight days after their first date.

Cecelia Wagers Sousa, 29, said she screened 40 tapes and dated 14 men before finding John Philip Sousa IV, whom she married May 22 after knowing him two weeks.

John Sousa, a political campaign manager and the great grandson of the March King, says he wanted someone to have fun with on weekends, "but when you find the right person, I think you know it."

"Los Angeles is a hard town for singles if you are looking for more than a one-night stand. The bar scene is ugly...a meat market," Cecelia says.

Estelle Ullman, a director of the company and the mother of founder Jeff Ullman, agrees: "Los Angeles in 1977 is an incredibly difficult place to contact an equivalent relationship mate, somebody we'd like to tie down with."

She calls the company "relationship store," for people who want mates. In addition to marriages, a number of people who have met through videotape dating are living together, she says.

"Everyone is meeting here on a peer level," she says. "Most of our members have some financial success, so why not take a little of it to buy yourself a relationship, or access to a relationship?"

"The cost really turned me on," said Cecelia Sousa. "Someone who is looking for a date or a one-night stand is not going to pay $200."

Toll up to 75 cents on Bay bridges

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Increased 75-cent tolls on the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge, the San Mateo-Hayward Bridge and the Dumbarton Bridge have been approved by the state Toll Bridge Authority, which had little choice.

The toll has been 50 cents on the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge and 70 cents on the other two bridges.

Tolls are charged on westbound trips only.

The new tolls, effective July 1, as proposed by the Metropolitan Transportation Commission, were approved by the authority Tuesday.

Under 1975 legislation, the commission fixes the tolls and the authority must approve them, unless it determines they are insufficient to meet obligations, assistant secretary Richard East said.

Commuter books go up to $12 from $8.

Two-axle trucks will be charged 75 cents. They have been 70 cents, except that two-axle, six-wheel trucks were $1 on the Bay Bridge.

East said the best estimate is that the new tolls will add $8 million a year to revenue. This year the three bridges are expected to take in $25.5 million.

Savings and loan award

Mark Kendall, Amador Valley High School graduating senior, has been named winner of the Outstanding Student Award, sponsored annually by Franklin Savings and Loan Association in cooperation with the California Savings and Loan League. Melvin Killin, right, manager of the two Pleasanton offices of Franklin Savings and Loan presented the $100 cash award and an engraved bronze medallion. Kendall is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Kendall, 2318 Tanager Drive, Pleasanton. He has been appointed to the U.S. Naval Academy, Annapolis.

Livermore council rapped

PLEASANTON — A public forum on "City Hall Etiquette" Tuesday turned into a virtual barrage of criticism against Livermore Mayor Helen Tirsell and her council's inconsistency in applying the rules of decorum.

Sponsored by the Pleasanton-Livermore-Dublin Democratic Club, several community leaders were on hand to take part in the public debate — but, most of the evening was spent in lively debate about the Livermore mayor's ejection of Paul Tull from a June 6 council meeting for being too outspoken.

Tull, a leader of a recall movement against the entire Livermore council, had engaged in debate on a number of issues the night two police officers were called to escort him from council chambers.

Telling the audience that "the rules are applied fairly and consistently," Tirsell defended the council's "little red book" of policies and rules for conduct of city council meetings.

She noted a time limit had been established in 1975 to avoid one person from dominating the podium and cited from the California Penal Code, Section 403, which she said allowed ejection from meetings.

"Unrestrained behavior of an individual restricts the others at a meeting," said Tirsell. "The right to meet means little if outsiders are allowed to be disruptive."

Asked if she thought Tull was an "outsider," she said no.

"The problem seems to be uniformity in the application of the rules," said Livermore resident John Miller, who asked several probing questions of the mayor.

Miller said council has cut debate short by Tull and another Council watcher Roman Morkowski, but allowed former Mayor Don Miller to speak at length in budget sessions — including a remark about City Manager Bill Parness "ripping off the park funds" for use elsewhere in the budget.

"In the lexicon of street language, 'ripping off' means stealing," said John Miller, noting council did not publicly berate the former mayor for the remark while often berating Tull and Morkowski for similar remarks.

Livermore Vice Mayor Marshall Kamena retorted that gesture by a head Tirsell indicated disapproval and Don Miller responded with a similar head gesture.

John Miller then asked Tirsell if she agreed that warnings about being sent to jail for remarks could have a "chilling effect" on citizens who want to speak at public meetings.

There was no answer and Miller tried asking the question later with no success.

Pleasanton Vice Mayor Ken Mercer said he couldn't remember "ever having asked anyone to stop talking" at his council meetings, which he described as being "looser" than most city councils. One audience member asked Kamena if it was right to threaten a person with ejection if that person asks about possible conflicts of interest by council members. He was referring to remarks by Roman Morkowski who was threatened with arrest and jail May 16 when Kamena was chairing the meeting.

At that time, Morkowski asked his usual request for a congressional investigation of the way large corporations take advantage of towns like Livermore. He suggested a possible conflict by Tirsell because she earns income from corporate and Councilman Dale Turner for possible presures from the bank where he is employed.

Kamena defended his threat of ejection, noting "I warned him it wasn't pertinent to the issue and was a personal remark."

Morkowski's comments were made during the Open Forum, when any citizen is allowed to speak on any subject not already on the meeting's agenda.

County Supervisor Valerie Raymond said it wasn't a question of conflict of interest but "whether the remarks are in bad taste or are a personal attack. People have a right to make valid points and questions, but not the right to make insulting comments."

Another audience member stood up and berated most of the elected officials at the forum for forgetting the constitution.

Tirsell said Tull was ejected for shouting, being emotional and making repetitious remarks. John Miller retorted that there was nothing in council policy about repetitious remarks.

Tirsell was also asked what could be impertinent (dictionary: "irrelevant or 'rude'") about remarks of choice by speakers in an open forum.

Preview of aid for crime victims

CONCORD — Violent crimes leave more than physical trauma. There are wrecked homes, bills going unpaid because of lost work time spent in the hospital or court and the threat of being confronted by the suspect or his friends.

But, with few exceptions there has been no central agency established to help victims apply for state compensation or otherwise put their lives back together.

Tuesday night, however, Contra Costa Crime Prevention Committee members got a preview of such program which will soon be working here.

Dave Mandel, program director of San Mateo County's Aid to Victim and Witnesses, described how his program worked.

It began merely as a means of helping violent crime victims with the confusing and complex forms they have to fill out to receive compensation from the state.

Up to $10,000 in medical expenses or lost wages will be refunded by the state to victims of violent crimes, but it's often a year or more before the money arrives. Meanwhile the victim has lost his home or car, Mandel said.

He used the case of a young San Mateo couple as an example of his program. Last December, a man berserk on PCP, a hallucinogenic drug, and broke into the couple's home. Armed with a butcher knife, he repeatedly stabbed the pregnant woman in the stomach.

When her 22-month-old son screamed the assailant ran into the nursery and fatally stabbed him, Mandel said.

Police were called and began processing the scene for evidence, eventually identifying and arresting a suspect.

"But in a few seconds their entire life was altered. Many things needed doing. There were $40,000 in uninsured medical bills. The baby was born prematurely and lived three weeks in intensive care before dying. Another $4,000 in home repairs, including carpentry, cleaning and repainting the blood-drenched home, was needed," Mandel said.

"Because we have a program many services were provided. All the bills were paid through Medi-Cal after we helped organize the family's financial accounts. An industrial cleanings service volunteered to clean the home. Other volunteers repaired and repainted it. Others took down the Christmas tree and removed the unopened children's presents so the family wouldn't have to see them again," Mandel said.

The bank was advised of the family's problem and mortgage payments were suspended until the father went back to work.

But the program also assists witnesses from becoming victimized by the criminal justice system. Many witnesses know little about why they are testifying, where the courts are, where to park, what is happening and why they must return or even what the outcome of the case was, Mandel said.

The program provides these services, he said.

District Attorney William O'Malley said Contra Costa will soon have a similar program.

How county will spend federal grant money

Leshar News Bureau
MARTINEZ — A variety of county construction projects to be funded with a special federal grant were approved Tuesday by the Board of Supervisors.

Going against a staff recommendation, the supervisors compromised and agreed to share part of the $4 million Public Works Employment Act grant with local cities, school and fire districts.

Supervisors Eric Hasseltine, Danville, and Robert Schroder, Walnut Creek, argued that governmental entities other than county government should reap the benefits of the grant.

Hasseltine particularly objected to a county staff proposal that $2 million be spent on 15 storm drain improvement projects.

In the San Ramon Valley, for example, there is a need for more school classrooms, he said.

Mike Walford, chief deputy public works director, warned that the supervisors' good heartedness might cause problems with federal officials because a different list of projects than one originally submitted a year ago was approved by the board.

Originally during Tuesday's debate, Supervisors Nancy Fadden, Martinez, and James Kenny, Richmond, sided with the county staff position that the money should all go to county government - sponsored projects.

But Kenny later said rather than delay the matter a week with a tie vote, he would side with Schroder and Hasseltine to approve sharing the money. Supervisor Warren Boggs, Concord, was on vacation and absent from the meeting.

Projects to be funded with the federal money are: —New kitchen and dining room at the county jail farm near Clayton, $896,000.

—Curb ramps for the handicapped at locations all over the county, $190,000.

—Addition to the county flood control building on Glacier Drive, Martinez, $423,000.

—Improvements to the county civic center, Martinez, $744,000.

—New parking lot at Diablo Valley College, $150,000.

Installation of fire detection system at schools in the San Ramon Valley Unified School District, $400,000.

Pitch for legal aid by attorney

Leshar News Bureau
MARTINEZ — The county bar associations have offered to administer a program representing poor people in legal conflict cases in an effort to relieve Superior Court of the burden.

In a pitch to the Board of Supervisors Tuesday, Edward Merrill, a Danville lawyer, said an inter-bar association committee would be used to run the program at a cost of $700,000 per year.

Supervisors referred to offer to the administrator's office and the board's Finance Committee.

State law reserves the right of all indigent persons to legal representation if they are charged with a crime, but it also prevents a public defender from being assigned to the cases involving two or more defendants that might be in conflict with one another.

Under the county's present system, an indigent client in such a case is assigned a private counsel by the court.

Volunteers cutting crime in Contra Costa

MARTINEZ — Citizen volunteers are having an impact on the county's crime rate according to the Sheriff's Office which released statistics Wednesday showing a 16 per cent decrease in burglaries.

The decrease covers the first quarter of 1977, according to Lt. H.E. Van Orden who credited much of that decrease to the County Crime Prevention Committee's which marked its third anniversary Tuesday.

In ceremonies marking the anniversary, Martinez consulting engineer Linc Grayson was named Citizen of the Year.

Sheriff's detective James Hilger was named Officer of the Year. Hilger, past co-chairman of the committee, is assigned to the sheriff's crime prevention team.

The Crime Prevention Committee is a joint citizens-law enforcement organization.

Its members range in age from over-70 to one teen-ager, and come from all economic and racial groups in the county.

With the exception of the law enforcement members and two crime prevention coordinators, all the members are volunteers.

Certificates of appreciation were presented to many of those volunteers Tuesday night.

West County volunteers honored were Elizabeth McClain and Elda De Paoli, both Richmond; Willie Parker and Dell Peacock, both of Montalvin Manor.

Other west county volunteers were Faye Bowser, Alice Davidson and Jack Maboy, all of Orinda; Carmel McKay of El Cerrito, Roelfina Prins of El Sobrante, Jessie White of Kensington, and Jane Wood of El Sobrante.

Leshar Newspapers received an outstanding service award as did John VanLandingham of the Leshar News Bureau.

Other Leshar Newspapers reporters honored were Jane Putnam and Brad Rovenpara of the Sun's Papers in Lafayette, and Lance Frederickson of the Concord Transcript.

The Valley Pioneer also was awarded a certificate of appreciation.

Rancher aid extended

Emergency feed and cattle transportation assistance programs in Contra Costa and Alameda Counties have been extended through Sept. 1.

The programs have been in effect since Feb. 2. They enable eligible livestock producers in the two counties to receive financial assistance in buying feed grains and roughage up to 10 pounds per cow or other animal equivalent per day on the basis of two cents per pound not to exceed 50 per cent of the actual cost.

The program also gives financial assistance in transporting animals to available pasture.

Eligible livestock producers who will not have sufficient feed for their animals during the extended period should visit the local ASCS office at 5554 Clayton Road, Concord, phone 685-3645, and apply for assistance in the extended period.

Producers must provide data on the number and kind of livestock on hand, number of acres of feed grains or other roughage for harvest on the farm and expected dates for beginning harvest; number of acres of pasture (dry and irrigated) that is now or will become available for livestock and expected date it will become available.

Previous participants in the program also must report the amount of feed harvested since May 1 and disposition of such feed, such as the amount fed to ineligible and eligible livestock, amount sold, amount on hand, and so on.

New participants should tell the amount of feed on hand and that sold since Dec. 15, 1976. Extension of an existing approval is not automatic. Livestock producers who have been approved under the program must file a new application at the county office for assistance for the extended period.

Rec leader needed at Village

Looking for a job? Komandorski Village, the City of Pleasanton's low-income housing needs in Dublin, a program coordinator to run the Summer Youth Recreational Program and the Summer Lunch program.

The recreation program will parallel the playground offering in Pleasanton. The lunch program is open to youths up to 18-years-old living in the village.

Applicants for program coordinator must be at least 19-years-old and be able to direct the coordinated programs and to supervise a staff of four or five young adults.

They must also keep accurate records and be responsible for necessary reports.

The coordinator will work an estimated 35 to 40 hours per week at $3.50 to $3.75 per hour.

Applications are available at the Pleasanton Recreation Department, 200 Bernal Ave., between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Dr. Joyce Brothers

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: After 10 years of marriage, my husband and I finally got a divorce. Of sorts, at least. He convinced me that it would be simpler if we continued to share the house, which seemed logical. However, though he feels free to come and go as he pleases or have friends in, he objects when I do the same. And on occasion he even forces me to have relations with him. I feel absolutely nothing for this man and am sure I made a mistake. Should I have changed the lock when we first divorced? — P.C.

DEAR P.C.: The key to your situation wasn't in changing the lock but in bolting your door.

You don't indicate whether your ex is contributing to the support of the house as well as sharing it, but either way it sounds like a bad deal. He certainly has no right to protest your coming and going or entertaining at home. You're no longer married. Why should he have the best of everything?

That goes for having relations also. A recent court ruling in New Jersey upheld a woman's right to have her former spouse arrested for rape in just such a situation. Whatever privileges your ex-husband contracted for with the wedding license he forfeited with the divorce decree.

Psychologically, it sounds as though your "man" can't face up to the fact that the comforts and companionship he enjoyed before are no longer his for the taking. He should be forced to accept the responsibility of his new status.

You have two choices — either show him the door with no ands, ifs or buts, or get yourself a good real estate agent and another place to live. Or perhaps, despite your denial of feeling for the man, you subconsciously want his attentions and presence. If so, that opens up a third choice. Think about it.

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: Shortly after we were married, my job necessitated a move quite a distance from the area where my wife and I grew up. For the past 10 years, she has periodically insisted that she has to visit her family, leaving me alone. Sometimes she is gone for as long as six months at a time. It's not as though she doesn't see her family otherwise — they are here for two or three months every winter. Fortunately we have no children — she doesn't want any — so that during those months of loneliness and forced bachelorhood I can indulge myself in other companionship without too much remorse. I still love my wife, but is this any way to run a marriage? — P.O.D.

DEAR P.O.D.: What marriage? It sounds more like you're running a hotel for your wife and a winter resort for your in-laws.

I can't tell from your letter whether your wife is an only child, but it's obvious that she has never matured enough to accept the biblical admonition that a wife should leave her parents and cleave to her husband.

That doesn't mean she has to forsake them, but certainly her first obligation is to you. Perhaps she is so sure of you that she's not worried about how you will avoid your "forced bachelorhood."

However, the fault is equally yours. Why do you put up with such behavior? If you were more forceful in your objections, pointed out her responsibilities as a wife, and tried to reason with her, you might be open only to those winter visits of her parents rather than her prolonged absences.

You don't have a marriage; you've only legalized your cohabitational rights.

Johnny Wonder's QUESTION CORNER

Q. "WHAT IS A CONSTELLATION?"

A. IN ASTROLOGY A CONSTELLATION IS A GROUP OF STARS THAT SEEM TO FORM A PATTERN IN THE SKY.

CHRIS BROUGHTON HAMPTON, MA

URSA MAJOR (THE BIG BEAR)

The stars we see at night are not scattered evenly across the sky. Instead, they are arranged in groups. These groups of stars are called constellations, from the Latin term meaning "stars together."

The people of long ago imagined the constellations as shapes of animals, people, and other things, and gave them such names as Ursa Major, the Big Bear, Pegasus (the horse with wings), Leo the lion, and Orion, the hunter. Today, astronomers recognize 88 different constellations in the sky. Don't expect to recognize the constellations from the objects they are named for. They don't actually have the outlines that the names suggest. Not all the constellations can be seen from any one place on earth. Some can be seen only from the northern half of the world, and others can be seen only in the southern half.

The constellations also appear in different parts of the sky at different times of the year.

Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — Three years ago I fell and broke my left hip and left foot. I had expert attention and am very happy to be working as usual. I teach piano and I carry a cane to be safe when I go places.

I have had more falls since the bad one and even sprained the ankle of the same foot that I broke. I think I am fortunate not to have broken more bones.

The doctor discovered that I have soft bones and he prescribed four calcium tablets to be taken daily for the rest of my life. I am 78.

My inquiry is this, have I taken the calcium tablets long enough now to be more safe in regard to broken bones? Is it all right to take two tablets at the same time? I sometimes realize that I have forgotten to take all four tablets.

DEAR READER — I am glad you have done so well and that you are still active.

You will need to keep on taking those calcium pills that your doctor gave you. He knows that as long as you keep taking calcium it will help decrease the loss of calcium from your bones, a condition that we call osteoporosis. The problem is common in women after the menopause and there is a continual loss of bone substance. A large percentage of broken hips and other fractures are caused by "brittle bones" from osteoporosis.

You need to take about a gram of calcium a day.

That problem may be related to your eyesight or you may have a disturbance in your balance mechanism.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I've been told that gum chewing is dangerous and can cause the jaw to move out of place. Can you give me the straight facts about gum chewing. I chew about 10 pieces of gum a day so as to keep from eating in between meals. Is this too much or too harmful?

DEAR READER — No, anything like a normal chewing mechanism will not cause you to dislocate the jaw.

The only real harm is the sugar content. A constant source of sugar in the mouth may increase your chances of having cavities.

The other problem is swallowing air. This can cause air or gas accumulation in the digestive system and makes some people uncomfortable. If you are not having this problem you can forget that.

Other than these two possible problems it really doesn't make any difference how much gum you chew.

South won the trump lead with the seven and counted winners. There were six side-suit winners and if he could take seven trump tricks he would have his grand slam. It looked easy to him as long as he could ruff two diamonds in dummy.

So he cashed the ace and king of diamonds, ruffed a diamond, cashed dummy's ace and king of hearts, ruffed a heart, ruffed his last diamond, ruffed dummy's last heart, started to run his last three trumps and suddenly found that the hand had collapsed because West had started with four trumps.

A little extra thought at an early stage of the play would have saved the grand slam. The essence of any cross ruff-type hand is to cash your side-suit winners before you start your cross ruff.

Correct technique would be for South to cash all the aces as tricks two to seven. After that he could have cross ruffed losers in any order. At some stage of the proceedings West would have been forced to start using his trumps to ruff but South would simply overruff. West would never be able to score with one of them.

Sunol park wilderness draws young biologists

"Essentially it's their decision — they tell me, 'This is what I want to know.' These kids are here because they want to be here."

After noting the bird's age, sex, wing length and overall condition, Abbots hands the small bird to a 12-year-old. A few seconds of awkward handling is calmed by patient instruction. Then the youngster opens his hand, and the bird looks about quizzically before whizzing away in a flash.

The youngsters are taught that such information will help conservationists track the bird's migratory patterns and eventually aid in protecting the species.

Thirteen-year-old Joe Williams of Livermore appreciates the reality of nature close-up. "You get to see different things — instead of seeing it on TV," he says.

Joe got his first love of nature by backpacking with his family, spurred on by his mother. He vaguely remembers coming to the park when he was about five.

His interest centers on squirrels this trip. "Those burrows are made by ground squirrels," he says, "but the snakes go in the holes and eat the squirrels."

The course so far is "neat," Joe advises, but the food is, well — in Joe's words, "When something goes into a big pot, it usually doesn't turn out too good."

Marya Watson of East Avenue School in Livermore agrees, in part: "It's alright; it really couldn't be improved out here."

Swimming eases the heat, even though snakes accompanying the kids as they cool off in the swimming hole near camp. Noting a grimace, she adds, "They're not dangerous."

She has seen two rattlesnakes since her arrival, although 22 were counted in one area near the camp. "This one was throwing up 'cause he had just eaten a squirrel when he saw us coming and tried to protect himself," she giggles.

The course cost $60, but the park district made available three full scholarships for deserving children. In addition, the union representing the park naturalists donated two partial scholarships. "If some kids have talent, we don't want them cut out just because of money," Abbots says.

Naturalist Alan Kaplan, working on a PhD in entomology at UC Berkeley, is "co-director" of the program, Abbots says in appreciation. "He really knows how to deal with kids."

While pouring over a box of freshly pinned bugs, Kaplan points to a blacklight shining on a bedsheet tied between two trees. "The ultraviolet frequency gives off light waves human can't see," he says. "Bugs come for miles to see that."

"And it turns scorpions a bright green," a chorus of eager voices adds.

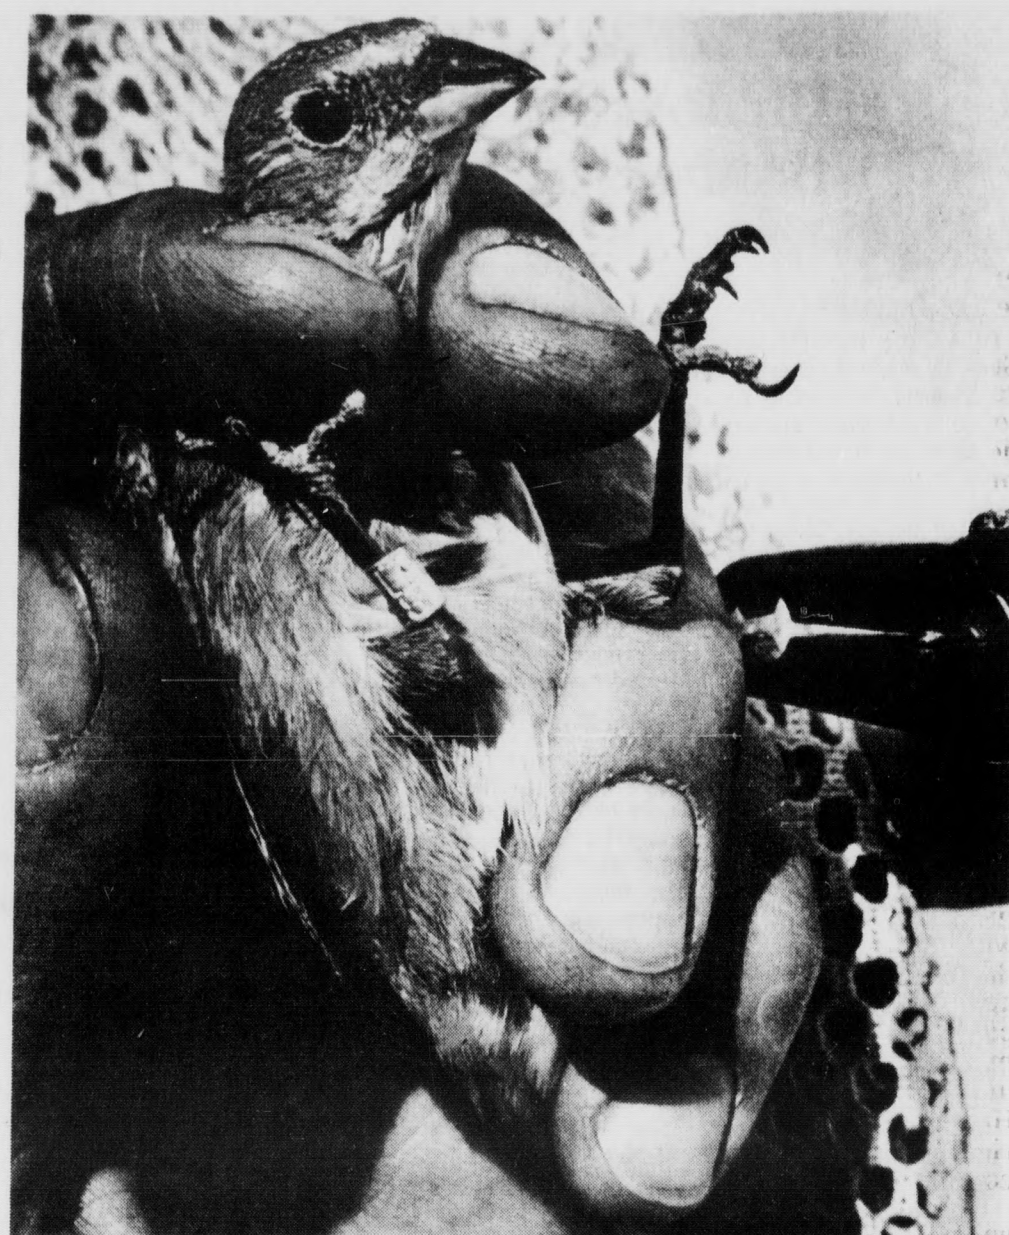

"There are no report cards or grades here," Abbots says. "But there is a built-in incentive — if they get involved and show promise, they can be accepted back into the program the next year."

Exceptional students will be invited to Tilden Park this summer to continue their individualized study. "This is it," Abbots says. "This is the kids' idea of fun."

—by Bill Cauble

Naturalist Alan Kaplan pins another entry to his bug board, a collection that helps youngsters study the properties and mannerisms of insects. He uses a blacklight to attract bugs for his collection.

Naturalist Steve Abbots displays a freshly banded bird who had earlier flown into the a nearby "mist net." After information on the bird is recorded, it is released. Its migratory habits and other data will aid conservationists in preserving the bird's natural habitats.

Fire officials warning of home pollution risk

Don't be a victim of home pollution, warns the Pleasanton Fire Department.

You might not think of it that way, but the combustible clutter that piles up in attics, basements, closets and garages is a kind of pollution — and just as dangerous as other kinds, the department says.

We generally make these spots resting places for everything we think we might possibly use again, or things we think are just a little too good to be thrown away — broken down furniture, lamp shades, mattresses, draperies, old magazines, old clothing and similar stuff.

But these combustibles create danger in the home, because they provide the starting place and fuel for a fire which could destroy the home and jeopardize lives.

Your local fire department urges every householder in the community to join in a thorough home clean-out this summer.

If everyone were to get busy in this anti-pollution drive against combustible clutter, says the department, homes would definitely be safer from fire.

Keep your home out of the statistics collected by the National Fire Protection Association, advises the department. An estimated 603,500 homes were hit by fire last year.

Guard tots from fire

Don't risk your children's lives for a brief respite in the summer sun, warn local fire officials.

Studies by the National Fire Protection Association reveal that one of every three children who die in fires is alone and helpless when fire strikes.

Remember to take the children with you when you leave home, say officials, even if it's just for a quick cup of coffee with a neighbor or a hurried trip to the grocery store. Otherwise, leave youngsters with a competent older member of the family or with a reliable babysitter.

Hundreds of children are killed by fire each year because parents gamble that nothing will happen while they are away.

Unhappily, fires sometimes start at just such unguarded moments. Or the children themselves mischievously or accidentally start a fire.

Hot, dry summer prompts warning to home painters

Is painting part of your summer remodeling program?

If so, warns the Pleasanton Fire Department, keep fire hazards danger down.

Water-based paints have taken a lot of the hazards out of painting, but be sure you know what you're doing. For safety's sake, always read the label on the container, and be particularly careful with floor finishes, thinners, solvents and removers.

Following guidelines established by the National Fire Protection Association, the safest paint-up products are those labeled non-combustible or non-flammable. The next best choice has "Caution — Combustible" on the label.

Avoid any products marked "Warning — Flammable," and "Danger — Extremely Flammable" if you can possibly find a satisfactory substitute.

With products carrying the flammable warning, use only in a well ventilated area remote from open flames or operating electric heaters and other sources of possible ignition. Always observe the "no smoking" rule religiously.

Store all potentially dangerous products in tightly capped metal cans — never in glass containers — and keep them in a cool place.

When using oil-base paints, linseed oil, turpentine and varnishes, be careful with oily rags. Dispose of them in a tightly covered metal can.

Light-headed Cubs sail past SF

SAN FRANCISCO — They've lost fewer games than any of their 26 major league counterparts.

They shake their booty to K.C. and the Sunshine Band in the happiest locker room this side of Farrah Fawcett-Majors' dressing quarters. Two-hundred dollar suits hang from 25 pegs and their millionaire manager strolls the premises savoring a grin money can't buy.

The San Francisco Giants haven't beat them all year and so the Chicago Cubs, seven games ahead of the National League East, were genuinely looking forward to their four-hour flight home to O'Hare.

"We're really gonna be flying," said pitcher Jim Todd, one of the fortunate fugitives from the Oakland A's, his droopy mustache turning upward in sly recognition of his brutal double entendre.

The Cubs, speeding toward a possible "el train series" with the White Sox, had just insured a victory in their season set with the Giants by beating them, 4-2 for the seventh time without a loss. And again, Ed Halicki was the victim of a punchless San Francisco line-up. Removed from the game for a pinch-hitter in the sixth, with the Giants trailing 3-0, Halicki kept his earned run average right around three, but watched his record fall to 6-6.

Bill Bonham got the win for Chicago, with some late inning help from Bruce Sutter (say, Sue-ter), who recorded his 18th save despite some drastic control problems.

Though the Giants failed to score a run for him, Halicki was not the perfect martyr, yielding a home run to give the Cubs an immediate lead and two subsequent extra base hits.

In the first Larry Bittner swung from his heels and planted a Halicki change up 425 feet away into the right field foot-ball seats.

"That's about as hard as I can hit one," the well-traveled Bittner admitted. "It was almost down in the dirt, if I'm gonna hit a home run that's where the pitch has to be."

The Cubs scored again in the second with a rapid two-out rally.

Steve Swisher started it with a line drive off the center field fence and Bonham knocked his batterymate in with a liner down the right field line that hopped up and almost got over Jack Clark's shoulder.

In the fourth, Jose Morales led off and lifted a towering homer run that came straight down, just a few feet across the left field fence.

The Giants scored both of their runs in an agonizing two-out rally during the bottom of the seventh.

Bill Madlock had reached first when his lead-off bouncer forced shortstop Mick Kelleher to hurry and the Cubs' last-minute starter threw the ball away. Madlock stayed at first through a pair of outs.

Then, a single to left by Clark and a walk to Marc Hill loaded the bases and brought Sutter into the game. He, in turn, walked pinch-hitters Willie McCovey and Derral Thomas on a total of nine pitches to give the Giants their runs.

Sutter couldn't understand what the problem was.

"I threw 20 straight fast balls trying to get the ball in," he said. "I couldn't do it. The wind here affects me, I have to start my fork ball up higher or it bounces in the dirt."

He added, "I was trying to groove the ball, anything to throw a strike, and sometimes that's the hardest way to pitch. But I've never walked two batters in a row like that before, even the one McCovey swung at was in the dust."

The threat ended when Rob Andrews flew out to left, but the Giants drew to within a run and, exercising their privileges under baseball's sacred "Book" could have played for the tie as the home team.

Until ex-Giant Bobby Murcer singled home Bittner in the following inning to once again increase Chicago's lead to two. Why didn't the Giants walk the red-hot Murcer with a base open?

"I'll have to take the blame for that," said manager Joe Altobelli. "I went out and we talked about it, but decided against it. It made a big difference, if we were down by one, we could have bunted for a lead."

But the Giants really couldn't: Sutter set down six successive hitters to end the game.

Gottfried, Panatta out of Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England — Fifth-seeded Brian Gottfried and 10th-rated Adriano Panatta of Italy were upset victims Wednesday in the third day of play at the 100th Wimbledon Tennis Championships.

A record crowd of 37,355 which jammed the grounds of the All-England Club saw Byron Bertram, a notoriously erratic South African, find his top form and beat Gottfried 6-2, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3 in a second-round match.

Sandy Mayer of Menham, N.J., a slim shot-maker with a reputation for giant-killing at Wimbledon, put out Panatta 8-9, 6-0, 6-2, 6-4.

The two top favorites, defending champion Bjorn Borg and controversial Jimmy Connors, both moved into the third round, but each had to fight his way out of trouble.

Borg trailed by two sets to big Mark Edmondson of Australia and said afterwards he was lucky to save his skin. He came back to win 3-6, 7-9, 6-2, 6-4, 6-1.

Connors overcame Marty Riessen 6-4, 8-9, 6-1, 8-6.

Meanwhile, the women's spotlight belonged to an aging queen, Billie Jean King, and a rising young princess, Tracy Austin.

The 33-year-old King, returning from an 18-month absence from tournament competition in search of her seventh Wimbledon singles crown, beat 17-year-old Anne Smith of Dallas 6-8, 6-0, 6-3.

And Austin, a 14-year-old schoolgirl from Rolling Hills, Calif. and the youngest competitor in Wimbledon's 100-year history, made a successful debut against Ellie Vessies-Appel of The Netherlands, winning 6-3, 6-3.

Before the match Connors met with Sir Brian Burnett, chairman of the All-England Club, apparently to discuss the events of last Monday, when 43 Wimbledon champions paraded on the center court to mark the centenary of the tournament, but Connors stayed away without explanation.

The club later accused Connors of discourtesy and said he would not get one of the commemorative medals struck for the champions.

Ilie Nastase, the No. 6 seed who usually is on his best behavior at Wimbledon, clowning and argued in the course of a 7-9, 3-6, 7-5, 8-6, 6-3 victory over Andrew Pattison of Rhodesia. He was sternly lectured about his behavior by the tournament referee.

Anger survives, reaches semi's

Pleasanton's Matt Anger won two grueling matches in the steaming hot sun yesterday afternoon to advance to the semi-finals of the Northern California Tennis Association's Under-14 Sectional Tournament at Castlewood Country Club in the Pleasanton hills.

Anger's first match of the afternoon was against Tim Duff who Tuesday was an impressive winner over Robert Mitchell.

The Valley resident struggled through a 6-4 opening set win, and put away Duff in the second set with a more convincing 6-2 triumph to set up his quarter-final match with sixth-seeded Adam Sherburne.

Anger was hot in rolling to a 6-1 win in the first set, taking the second set 6-3 to advance to today's semi-final match with third-seeded Jim Heebner at 10:30.

Heebner defeated Sacramento's Darryl Lee 6-2, 6-4 in the third round before disposing of Geordie McKee, 6-1, 6-0 in the quarter-finals. Anger, who is second seeded, will be the first seeded player Heebner has seen in the tournament which began Monday.

The other semi-final match will pit Danville's Gerg Holmes against surprising Phil Discolo. Holmes, top-seeded and an easy winner in both of his matches yesterday, will go up against an unseeded player in Discolo, who fought through a three set, 6-4, 4-6, 2-0 win over fourth-seeded Ken Derr when the laterr incurred an injury during the last set.

The girls held third round matches yesterday and will hold quarterfinal matches beginning today at 9:00 a.m. Stacy Savides, top-ranked, will face Diane Bauer, Judy Newell is pitted against Kulei McCalla, Erika Smith goes up against Andrea Bruno, while Maria Ryder tangles with Robin White. All matches are 9:00.

The girls' semi-finals began at 11:30 today, while finals in both classes are slated for a 10:30 start on Friday.

Finley-Kuhn battle rages on

Ziegler NHL President
CHICAGO — John A. Ziegler, a 43-year-old Detroit attorney who would like a "full house in every arena for every game," was elected president and chief executive officer of the National Hockey League Wednesday.

Ziegler succeeds Clarence S. Campbell, who held the presidency for 32 years, and becomes the fourth president in the 60-year history of the NHL. Ziegler will assume his responsibilities after the NHL meetings in Toronto in August.

Ziegler was chosen by the league's board of governors. Earlier this month, the governors held a special meeting in Montreal to make constitutional changes to broaden the authority of the presidency.

"I object to being called Clarence Campbell's successor," said Ziegler. "No one will ever succeed Mr. Campbell. I will be looking forward to Clarence's continued counsel."

Ziegler was born Feb. 9, 1934, in Grosse Pointe, Mich., and played amateur hockey from 1949 to 1969. He graduated from the University of Michigan in 1957, receiving bachelor of arts and law degrees. He has been in private law practice since 1957.

Ziegler became associated with the Detroit Red Wings of the NHL in 1959. As an alternate governor for the club, he worked on many of the NHL's committees and has been involved intimately with the league's litigation and relations with the players' association. For the past seven years he has been vice president and general counsel of the Red Wings.

Preceding Ziegler as presidents of the league were Frank Calder (1917-1943), Mervyn "Red" Dutton (1943-1946) and Campbell (1946-1977).

Campbell's stepping down ends a remarkable era in the NHL. He has been one of the most respected leaders in professional sports. During his reign, Campbell, 71, guided the league through its greatest years of growth from six teams to 18 teams by 1974.

The NHL meetings will continue through Friday. The players' association and the owners will meet Thursday. The league also is expected to take up the question of a prospective merger with the World Hockey Association.

Ziegler refused to comment on "amalgamation with the World Hockey Association because the matter is too speculative."

missioner. "The similarities between the Seaver deal and my assignment of Vida Blue to the New York Yankees are striking," Finley said last week. "Both deals were made on June 15, the trading deadline. Both involved Cy Young Award winning pitchers."

In his tirade, Finley said, among other negative things, that Kuhn was "irrational" and "vindictive."

"I don't think Charlie is making this charge seriously, in the sense that he believes it," Kuhn said. "He's doing it to provoke me into a public debate, for the purpose of his continuing litigation and for the purpose of his threatened litigation against me. I don't want to play that game."

— by Associated Press

Kuhn said the Seaver deal was not really similar to the sales of Vida Blue to the Yankees for $1.5 million and Joe Rudi and Rollie Fingers to Boston for $1 million each.

"Charlie sold his players last June 15 and got nothing back," Kuhn said. "Whether you like the Met deal or not, at least they got back four respectable players."

"Finley's sales would have decimated the 1975 Western Division championship club," Kuhn said. "They darn near won their division last year. Maybe if they didn't hold out those three players for nearly two weeks (Finley refused to play his three stars for awhile), they would have won their division."

Her heart's on track

Cheri Williams' love of running never seems to stop.

The Livermore High School track and cross-country star, who will be a senior in the fall, will compete in a Jr. Olympics qualifying meet at Cal-State Hayward Sunday.

She plans to run the two-mile and maybe the mile or 880.

"I've been keeping busy since the state meet," she commented. "I've run in several all-comers meets during the week and some long distance races on the weekends."

In fact, Cheri finished first among the women runners in the Lake Chabot Run in Castro Valley last weekend, running the 6.95 mile course in 45:22. There were about 40 women in the competition.

Williams also ran with the San Jose Cinders in the AAU Jr. Women's National meet at UCLA June 13-14.

Cheri teamed with Ann Regen, Marquetta Belk and Deana Figslieni to finish third in the two-mile relay in 8:55.0. Williams' split was 2:14.0.

"We almost finished first," admitted Williams. Regen won the 880 at the prep state meet, competing for Camden High School, while Belk was fourth in the 440 and ran on Silver Creek High's fast 440 and mile relay teams.

Cheri was brothered by a leg injury during the prep season but says it's all right now.

"Actually, I felt fine at the state meet," she went on. "But the fast time I had in the mile trials made me feel kind of sore the morning of the finals."

Williams ran a personal best 5:05.0 to finish fifth in her mile heat but managed a 10th place in the finals. She also finished sixth in the two-mile, clocking a lifetime best of 10:51.9.

Cheri ran two or three races a meet during the prep season but is thinking along different terms for the state meet next year.

"I think if I make the state meet next season I'll just concentrate on one race," she explained. "It's just too tough to compete in two events like that, particularly when you have to run heats in one of them."

After the qualifying meet Sunday there will be a regional meet and a national meet, the latter one to be contested July 22.

After that, Cheri will continue to practice, getting ready for cross-country in the fall.

For Williams, running is a year-around pastime.

Merit Cigarette Sets New Taste Standard.

Tests confirm low tar MERIT delivers flavor of higher tar cigarettes.

There is a way to get real taste from a cigarette without high tar.

Technology created it.

Taste tests proved it.

Smokers are confirming it.

In fact, 75% of all MERIT smokers are former high tar cigarette smokers—the toughest taste critics of low tar smoking.

MERIT—the cigarette packed with 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco—seems to be solving the smoker dilemma of having to choose between high tar or low taste.

If you smoke, you'll be interested.

VCSD recreation staff to lead active summer

DUBLIN — Recreation leaders will be kicking off a summer of fun for children living in the area of the Valley Community Services District Recreation Department.

Some of the leaders have worked before for VCSD's recreation department; others are new to the scene. All are energetic young people ready and willing to come up with innovative programs to entertain area children.

Barry Pike, Recreation Leader, has come up with many innovative programs while working at Shannon Park Community Center.

Sandy Dondero, Playground Leader at Fallon School this year, worked for the Valley Community Services District Recreation Department (VCSD) last year at Wells School. She is majoring in Recreation at San Jose State.

Veronica Hinojosa will be a Playground Leader at Dublin Elementary School this summer. She likes to backpack, hike and do mara-cramme. She is majoring in Liberal Arts at Sonoma State.

Dan Mays will conduct VCSD Recreation Department's first Peanut League Baseball Program this year. He teaches and coaches for Amador School District. Dan graduated from San Jose State with a degree in Recreation Administration. His knowledge of the game and experience working with children should make for a strong program.

Andrea Knowlton will be working as a Playground Leader at Wells School this summer. She is a Special Education major at St. Mary's College. She has worked for VCSD Recreation Department the past two summers.

Rex Anderson, Playground Leader at Fallon School, is a junior at St. Mary's College in Moraga. He played on their Varsity Football Team. He is studying to be a Physical Education teacher.

Pat Martin, Playground Leader at Nielsen, has worked as a Teacher's Aide at Murray School District. He is an Art-Graphics Design major at San Jose State. He does free-lance commercial art work in his spare time. He was a playground leader at Fallon the summer of 1975.

Pam Kennedy, Playground Leader at Walt Disney, recently graduated from Dublin High School. Pam's enthusiasm and love of children will make her an excellent first year leader.

VCSD Recreation Department officials predict.

Marina Sibilia, Parks and Recreation Director at Nielsen, has worked as a teacher's aide for Murray School District for the past three summers. She graduated from Dublin High School in June, 1977. Her outside interests include sewing, ballet, camping, backpacking and hiking.

Jim Untiedt, Playground Leader at Walt Disney, will be a senior at California High School in September. He holds Eagle Scout status with Boy Scouts of America. He has had training and leadership experience with Boy Scouts.

Rich Hall worked last summer as a Playground Leader at Dublin Elementary School. He will be working there again this summer. He attends U.C. Davis and is majoring in engineering.

Sharon Higgins will be working at all of the schools. She was hired as a specialist in the areas of Arts and Crafts, Simple Drama, Dance, etc. Sharon plans to present many interesting ideas to the children this summer. She attends Chico State University as a Physical Education major. Her previous experience includes three years in public and private recreation.

Fred Green, not pictured, comes to VCSD from the City of San Francisco Recreation and Parks Department. He worked in their traveling playmobile. He attends City College in San Francisco. Fred coaches basketball, baseball and soccer at St. Brendan School in San Francisco during his spare time.

Adult, teen scuba class starts soon

Scuba diving for adults and teens, offered by the Pleasanton Aquatic Center, will be taught in classes beginning June 27.

The classes will run on Mondays from 7 to 10 p.m. until August 15. Besides the 7 class periods, three ocean dives will be scheduled for Sundays during the classes. Those satisfactorily completing the class will receive NASDS certification.

A special "play round" evening has also been scheduled for adults each Thursday evening beginning June 23 at 8 p.m. Inner-tube water polo, diving, synchronized swimming, and recreation will be included.

Registration for all aquatic events and programs may be completed between 9:30 and 12:30, Monday and Friday, or during recreational swimming hours.

Pamphlet lists human services

PLEASANTON — Looking for some "human services?"

The city's got 'em. And they're listed, too, in the recreation and human resources department's newly published directory.

For one dollar, you can have a complete directory of all agencies in the Valley and the services available. Alameda County is producing a similar volume for county wide services.

The Valley directory is available at the Human Resources Section in the Veterans Memorial Building on Main Street from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Questions will be handled at 846-7805.

State's way of taxation challenged

SACRAMENTO (AP) — There's a good chance Japanese auto and television firms will build plants in California if the state changes its tax system, state Air Resources Board chairman Tom Quinn said Tuesday.

However, Tuesday, Quinn fell short of advocating that California change its ways of taxing foreign business.

He said Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. has ordered a review of the "unitary" method California uses in assessing income taxes against multi-national corporations.

By that method, a firm's California income taxes are based on how much of its world-wide operation is based in the state.

"If the review shows that the taxes can be reformed without causing financial problems for the state, I believe the governor will be suggesting some significant changes," Quinn said.

Quinn, who returned last week from a visit to Japan, said representatives of several Japanese electronic companies will look at possible California plant sites this summer, and at least one auto company will come to the state this fall.

He said the Japanese firms are concerned about California's business income tax as well as the "unitary" income assessment method.

Brown has advocated abolition of the inventory tax, and bills to do so are pending in the legislature.

Kaiser honors employees

PLEASANTON — A trio of local researchers are among seven Kaiser Center for Technology personnel recognized by the company for their published technical articles.

Pleasanton's Julie Mack-sey, Mike Pearson and Dave Stein were presented U.S. Savings Bonds by the local Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Corp. plant.

Macksey joined Jerry Seim and Russ Calkins in an article discussing the metallurgy of aluminum, beryllium, titanium and magnesium.

Seim lives in Walnut Creek and Calkins in Lafayette. Jeff Bailey of Lafayette, also was honored in the presentation.

The program, a continuing one initiated by Kaiser Aluminum in 1968 to encourage publication of technical and professional information, recognizes individuals whose articles are published in technical or trade journals.

Employees in each of the company's major divisions and staff groups are eligible.

Some 100 Center for Technology authors have been recognized through the program.

Remiro eyed in Folsom gun case

FOLSOM (AP) — Investigators trying to determine how and why a pistol and ammunition turned up in Folsom Prison are focusing on 10 inmates, one a member of the terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army, officials said Tuesday.

"It could have been an escape plot, or it could have been intrigue, prison gang rivalry, one or both," said Associate Warden Stewart Potter.

Joseph Remiro, 29, is one of 10 inmates still being held in special isolation cells while the investigation continues. He is serving a life term for the SLA murder of Oakland schools chief Marcus Foster.

Potter said others under investigation include Kenneth Como, serving time for stealing guns in a 1971 plot to free convicted mass murderer Charles Manson, and Bobby Augustus Davis, 36, who is serving four life terms for the 1970 murders of four California Highway Patrol officers in Los Angeles.

Authorities revealed Monday night that a 9-millimeter pistol, 28 rounds of ammunition and 17 convict-made knives were found June 4 at a cell-block of the maximum security prison.

Potter said it was the first time in the prison's history that a gun had been smuggled inside.

He said 17 convicts — picked "mostly by their associations" — were locked up in a special security housing unit for investigation.

The district is looking for older hores with good dispositions to provide a summer experience for youngsters who love horses but might not be able to own one.

The loan of a horse will enable day campers to learn, under professional supervision, to groom, feed and care for the animal and to take slow rides through Sycamore Grove. LARP officials said the loan of a horse is tax deductible.

The new Camp Bronco is located at Veterans Park and is for children ages 8-13. Sessions run from June 27 to August 19, Monday through Friday.

If you have a horse you would be willing to share or have any questions about the camp, call Nancy Bishop at the LARP offices, 447-7300.

YMCA plans family dinner

The Twin Valley YMCA will host a family dinner Sunday at Amador High School in Pleasanton between 4 and 7:30 p.m. For $2 per person or $7 per family, valley residents will enjoy hamburgers and hot dogs, along with games, live music and a judo demonstration. Tickets can be obtained at the "Y" office, 287 Rose Ave., Pleasanton, or at the door. For more details call 462-2211.

Brown looks at 'Robin Hood' plan

EDITOR'S NOTE — Cities across the country are trying to raise more money while business and the better-off move to the suburbs. The second and final part of a series on city taxes looks at a unique approach to the problem.

By JONATHAN WOLMAN
AP Urban Affairs Writer

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The Twin Cities, forging an almost unheard-of coalition with their suburbs, are on the road to solving one of the most vexing problems facing urban America: the flight of taxpayer dollars from the central cities.

Area officials — only half jokingly — call their complicated tax base sharing plan, "The Robin Hood strategy."

An official of the Twin Cities Regional Council, the group that administers the plan, says, "It is designed frankly, to take from the rich to help the poor."

"It gives a big boost to our over-all regional plan. We want to insure that we have factories where we want factories, and parks where we want parks, and shopping centers where we want shopping centers."

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., of California says his urban redevelopment plan will feature such a regional approach to taxation and officials in Michigan and Maryland also have expressed interest.

The plan draws tax revenues from the area's developing communities to foot the bill for municipal services in less prosperous suburbs and in Minneapolis and St. Paul.

Thus, all communities in the area share in business growth no matter where it occurs.

"An intangible benefit lies in the incentive it provides for people to work for the growth of the area as a whole," says Council Chairman John Boland. "It has substantially lessened the divisiveness caused by individual communities competing against each other."

The plan went into effect in 1975 after court challenges by some suburban communities. It is working smoothly with the shift in revenues so gradual that only a few communities are losing under the plan, while Minneapolis and St. Paul are netting large gains.

The tax-sharing plan places 40 per cent of the increase in assessed value of business property, a total of $175 million last year, into a tax-base pool shared by all communities in the seven-county area.

The result is to redistribute about $21 million in tax revenues.

This year's losers — 23 communities with a total population of 564,000 — are communities which have growing tax bases.

The winners — 18 with a total population of 1,047,000 this year — are cities which have a declining or steady growth rate. Minneapolis and St. Paul together received 36 per cent of the $21 million pool.

The communities that challenged tax sharing initially now are bent only on improving it, not destroying it.

Like the central cities, many of the inner-most suburban communities are beginning to suffer from declining tax bases as businesses move ever farther out.

"Under tax sharing, it's not whether you win or lose, it's a question of when you win," says Charles Weaver, the former Republican-suburban lawmaker who sponsored the law and now sits on the council.

Cities such as Bloomington, Minn. — a prosperous suburb of 80,000 — suffer losses under the plan as long as they attract new industry.

Bloomington's Lyle Olson, a leading critic of the tax system, says:

"It sounds like a great thing from the social view. But what worries me is that instead of being a tax distribution program, it may be a spending distribution program. Some of these cities do a lot of spending and now they're looking for somebody to pay the bills."

"Those of us who have commercial and industrial development must provide services — in-ground hook-ups, police, fire and all of that. We have less dollars to do it with because of this law."

The national Council for Urban Economic Development, in its analysis of the tax-sharing program, notes that cities like North Oaks, Minn., contribute very little to the tax pool, but because its residential property is "notoriously underassessed," North Oaks classifies as a "winner" under the program.

Another controversy concerning the tax-sharing program is that redistribution of revenues is based on population and property valuation, not the level of fiscal strain in a community.

"A needy city could lose under our current formula," says Boland.
